Note on Drinking Water in Iceland

Iceland has some of the purest and cleanest drinking water in the world. Tap water is 100% safe to drink everywhere—whether you're in the city or countryside. There is absolutely no need to buy bottled water. Carry a reusable water bottle and refill it as needed—it's sustainable and fresh from Icelandic natural sources!

Important Note:

The itinerary is subject to change based on weather conditions and operational feasibility. Iceland's weather, especially in winters, can be highly unpredictable, and certain activities like or road travel may be rescheduled or replaced for safety reasons.

Our team will always prioritize your safety and experience, and any modifications will be communicated in advance wherever possible.

What to Bring for Iceland (Northern Lights Trip)

- Waterproof & windproof jacket
- Thermal inner layers (top & bottom)
- Fleece or wool sweater
- Waterproof pants or snow pants
- Warm hat, gloves & scarf
- Woolen socks & insulated waterproof boots
- Swimwear (for hot springs like Blue Lagoon)
- Reusable water bottle
- Moisturizer & lip balm (for dry weather)
- European plug adapter (Type C/F)
- Day backpack & sunglasses
- Camera & extra batteries (cold drains power)

Northern Lights Disclaimer :

The Northern Lights (Aurora Borealis) are a natural phenomenon that occur under specific solar and weather conditions. While Iceland is known for offering good chances to witness them during certain months, sightings are never guaranteed.

Our itinerary is designed to include locations and conditions that maximize the likelihood of viewing the lights. However, as this is entirely dependent on nature, we advise all participants to be aware that their appearance is unpredictable and may not occur during the trip.

Regardless of the Northern Lights, Iceland offers a remarkable landscape and unique experiences that make the journey worthwhile.

- Travel should be safe & respectable for all. Follow our Travelers Conduct Policy and pay heed to instructions of Tour Manager & Guide for a smooth & hassle free trip:
